UNIVERSITY EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

N. L.

MR. A. L. CAMPBELL, B.A., who was recently appointed Professor of Law at the Adelaide University, in succession to Professor Coleman-Phillipson.

There is a movement on foot at the Adelaide University of which the public knows little. Therefore it does not realise its far-reaching benefits and advantages. It consists in the establishment of an Employment Bureau at the University. That may seem an anomaly to those who are not acquainted with the intimate relation between knowledge and industry which exists in the United States.

In that country every branch of learning and scientific research at the universities is exploited for the benefit of industries. The aim is to discover more economical methods of treatment and ascertain how to produce an improved article. That is the true pursuit of learning in its fullest and most practical sense, and the Americans have not only learned it, but are acting upon it.

Recently it was decided to adopt a like course at the Adelaide University. A suggestion has been made to the Council for the creation of a body, with a permanent secretary, whose duties would be to place graduates in positions which would enable them to make the best use of their training. Further than that, this body would advise students in regard to the subjects which would qualify them to obtain suitable positions. Its members would also interview employers and prepare a list of those desirous of employing university-trained men and women in their business.

In terms of this request the University Council has appointed a strong committee to deal with applications from intending employers and employes, and the necessary statutes have been prepared. The outcome of this will be in due time that graduates of the University will be found just as much in the ranks of industry as among the learned professions.

The trained mind is just as useful and essential in the industrial world as it is in the professional arena. It has been a wrong conception that industry was merely a matter of rule of thumb. As a fact there is no wider field for the exercise of intelligence and the prosecution of research work than in the manufacturing and other industrial activities upon which the national prosperity so largely depends.

When once the great mass of the people grasps the point that knowledge and education are necessary for industrial work, the cause of education will receive an unexampled stimulus and industrial vocations will be raised to the dignity and importance of the learned professions.

ELDER CONSERVATORIUM

On Monday next, in the Elder Hall, a chamber music recital will be given. Included in a programme of exceptional interest is Mozart's string quintet in G minor. This exquisite work reveals the fully-developed Mozart, and each one of the four movements abounds with the delicate inspiration so characteristic of this composer. Another beautiful work to be given is Arensky's trio in D minor for piano, violin, and cello. This trio has become one of the most popular of its kind, more perhaps, owing to its extraordinary brilliancy and effectiveness than to the depths of its musical ideas. Miss Hilda Gill will also sing a group of four Russian songs. Special attention is drawn to the fact that this concert will not be broadcast. Plan at S. Marshall & Son's, Gawler-place.

MELBA IN ADELAIDE

Mr. T. H. Jones Reminiscent

"Although it took place more than 40 years ago, I have a vivid recollection of Herr Elsasser's Benefit Concert, which was held in the Melbourne Town Hall on Saturday, May 17, 1884," said Mr. T. H. Jones, Mus. Bac., the well-known Adelaide organist. "I was asked to assist by Mr. Julius Herz, and chose Wely's 'Grand Offertoire in G' for my organ solo. On the same programme Mrs. Jones sang the aria 'Roberto o tu che adoro,' and I played her pianoforte accompaniment.

"This concert was remarkable for being Dame Nellie Melba's first appearance at a function of such importance. The huge hall was crowded, and among the audience were Their Excellencies the Governors of Victoria, Fiji, and New Zealand. Melba was given a wonderful reception for her singing of Verdi's 'As fors a lui' from 'La Traviata.'"

In an interview with Mr. Jones, which was published yesterday, it was stated that he originated the weekly recitals in the Adelaide Town Hall when he was city organist, a position he occupied from 1897 to 1923, whereas the recitals were inaugurated by him in 1884. At first they were regarded by the City Council as an experiment, but proved so successful that Mr. Jones was asked to continue the series. When he offered to revive the recitals when he was made city organist his proposal was warmly supported by the council.

Chemical Institute

The South Australian branch of the Australian Chemical Institute held its annual general meeting at the University on Thursday. Office bearers were elected. Mr. J. Henry retired as president in favor of Professor E. H. Rennie. In vacating office and welcoming the new president, he indicated to members that it was an open secret that the professor's presidency of the branch was but the preliminary to higher office, namely, the position of general president of the Australian Chemical Institute. He reminded members that this was the first time that this office had come to a South Australian, and both the branch and the Institute as a whole were to be congratulated on the choice which had been made.

Mr. R. G. Wilton, A.M.I.E. (Australia) who was on Thursday appointed District Resident Engineer for the central and south-eastern district of the Hydraulic Engineer's Department, is 33 years of age. He was born at Ardrara, Hutt street, Adelaide, and is a brother of Professor L. R. Wilton and Dr. A. C. Wilton, of Clarendon. He was educated at Prince Alfred College, where he spent 10 years, and was a cadet to Professor Chapman at the Adelaide University for three years. On leaving the University he joined the Irrigation Department, and later was transferred to the Hydraulic Engineer's Department. He was in charge of construction work at the Warren Reservoir (near Williamstown). Mr. Wilton served on Gallipoli with the 10th Battalion, and saw further service in France with the 50th Battalion, in which he rose to the rank of Senior Captain. He was wounded at Messines, and was invalided home. On his return he rejoined the Irrigation Department, and was appointed assistant engineer at the Cobdogla and Chaffey works. For the past two years he has been assistant engineer at the Adelaide office.

PUBLIC EXAMINATIONS

Yesterday was the closing date for entries for the intermediate, leaving certificate, and leaving honors examinations at the University. It will be some time before the number of entries received will be known, as many have to come from country centres. Mr. F. W. Eardley, Registrar of the University, stated on Thursday that he expected the entries to exceed last year's, which, however, were smaller than usual. About 2,600 candidates entered in all grades in 1924. Section B of the English literature syllabus has been omitted from the 1925 syllabus, enabling students to present themselves for examination in leaving English one year after passing the intermediate examination.
