

27th May, 1958.

My dear Chester,

This is to acknowledge, but not adequately to answer, your interesting letter and enclosures of May 19th. I do not believe one can discuss the validity of a test of significance except in relation to some well-defined null hypothesis, and for that I have groped round in vain. However, it is quite unlikely that I could have done anything to help you even if I had fully understood your problem.

Sincerely yours,

Ronald
