

16th. October 1950.

Dear Darlington,

I am enclosing a paper by F.M. Sheppard, from Ford's department at Oxford, on some exceptionally interesting results he has obtained this year with the land snail, C. nemoralis. I think it puts the lid on a lot of nonsense that Driver used to talk.

I also send a paper of my own, which is not very much use, but may help people in a subject where there is room for confusion.

Yours sincerely,
