

^y
6 February 1933.

Professor R.C. Punnett, F.R.S., Whittinghame Lodge,
CAMBRIDGE.

Dear Professor Punnett:

Very many thanks for the notes of misprints.
I am really glad to have/and to add ^{them} them to my collection.

I am particularly glad to see that R.C.P. does not reject Batesian mimicry. I am afraid I had read your book as an entire condemnation of the theory of evolution by the selection of small individual differences. I fancy the tone of my comments would have been different had I realised that this was not so.

Is not the "dominant" white in canaries lethal?
Do you happen to know how good a dominant the red in pigeons is?

Yours sincerely,