Here come the grieved a change of thought to find.
The curious here, to feed a craving mind.
Here the devout their peaceful temple choose
And here the poet meets his favourite Muse.

against their oppressors.

"Mr. Flaherty, did ye see e'er a purse knockin' round?"

"No, Mr. O'Rourke, ne'er a purse did I see."

"On yer honor as an Irish gintleman, Flaherty, did ye see e'er a purse knockin' about?"

"Here's yer durrtty purse!"

Pether Dooley's commentary on American imperialism
 In the good old days we wouldn't have thought life was worth living if we couldn't insult a foreigner.
 That's what they were for! When I was strong before old age deprived me of more or the patriotism
 & other infantile disorders, I never saw a Swede,
 a Hun an eye taller a Proobigaryan a German a Frenchman - that I didn't give him the shouldher,
 If it was an Englishman I give him the foot too!
 Thready rights des ye? We give him the same Thready rights he's giving - a drink to a Whack on the head. It seemed proper to us. If thou's right - to belong to war nationality, I was wrong to belong to another. If I was a man's grand board - to be an American, it was a disgrace to be a German, an' a joke to be a Frenchman An' that goes now. Ye can bump Army foreigner ye meet - but a Jew. Don't touch him: He's a live wire...
 There was good old days before we became a world jolly ticks.

The Jap is more to be feared because of his love of home an' his almost-ekal love of death. He is so happy in Japan he would rather die somewhere else. Ye must be polite to them because they're so little. A big man knows he don't have to fight, but when a man is little an' knows he's little, an' is thinking all the time he's little, + feels that everybody else is thinking he's little,
 look out f'r him.
